

SZERGEJ VINOGRADOV is an associate professor at the Institute of Digital Studies at Budapest Metropolitan University. For more than 20 years, he has been dealing with statistical analyzes related to economic, social, and biological sciences.

He defended his PhD thesis in 2009 at Szent István University on the topic of complex economic evaluation of arable land. He teaches statistical methodology subjects to students participating in basic, master's, and doctoral courses.

His current research areas: organizational social capital, and examination of the soft factors of national competitiveness in the era of digitization and robotization (Industry 4.0). He is a member of the editorial board of several journals and engages in intensive publication activities, the number of his scientific publications is over 200, and the number of publications cited in Scopus: is 20, Hirsch index (Hungarian Science Bibliography): 11.